

Key – Referral Types (Youth Justice)

Referral Type	Used to Document
Community	This includes all alleged offenses that occur in public spaces, at businesses, or anywhere that is not captured by the other four categories. This also includes alleged offenses that occur on the internet.
Detention or Corrections	The alleged offense occurred while the youth was placed at a detention facility, secured RCC, or any correctional placement. This includes while be transported by facility staff or law enforcement to or from the facility. If the youth is placed in any of these facilities, but is allowed to spend time in the community or at home (e.g., in a 180 program) and the alleged offense occurs in one of those locations, it should be documented as occurring in the location where it occurred.
Home	The alleged offense occurred at the youth's home (not an out of home placement). This includes the areas directly around the home (front yard, back yard, alley, etc.). If the youth lives in an apartment complex, it includes the area directly around the youth's apartment but not other apartments in the same complex (that would be considered "community").
Placement	The youth is placed in any out of home placement (other than detention, secured RCC, or corrections) and the alleged offense occurred at that placement.
School	The alleged offense occurred at the youth's school of enrollment. This includes any time the youth is at school for school sanctioned activities (including after school tutoring, extracurriculars, etc.). This does not include alleged offenses that occur at the school but outside of these times (e.g., vandalism that occurs in the middle of the night), or at another school where the youth is not enrolled. Those alleged offenses should be documented as occurring in the Community.
